Logica is the UK's largest independent software company, with over 11,000 staff and offices in 30 countries. Annual revenues exceed € 1.5 billion and market capitalisation is currently over € 5 billion. Investment in R&D plus in-depth market knowledge has made us a world leader in sectors such as mobile telecoms, energy trading systems and financial transaction processing.

Through many years of work in the space sector, including more than 25 years with ESA, Logica has become one of Europe's leading space software companies.

Logica is a key player in several ongoing satellite navigation initiatives including:

- EGNOS, where Logica is developing the critical integrity component known as the Check Set of the Central Processing facility,
- Galileo where Logica has worked on many of the key European Commission and European Space Agency projects such as the comparative system study, Gala and Galileosat as well as nationally funded work for the BNSC,
- ASTRON where Logica analysed new mass-market applications of satellite navigation,
- transport telematics programmes where Logica has developed fleet management systems making use of satellite navigation.

Logica - ensuring satellite navigation meets the needs of Europe's user groups
